PROUD TO BE THOMASIANS AT 400!

Gov't steps up moves to stop bird flu entry

GOVERNMENT officials said yesterday precautions have been heightened to keep the country free of bird flu, which has killed 10 people in Vietnam over the past month.

The Philippines has banned the import of all poultry products from countries affected by bird flu, and Agriculture Undersecretary Cesar Drilon told reporters the ban will remain in place.

The government has also installed disinfectant foot baths at seaports, airports and poultry farms, enforced a ban on the capture and killing of migratory birds, and encouraged farmers to keep their livestock away from lakes and marshes where migratory birds flock.

Surveillance in 20 "high-risk" areas has also been stepped up, officials said.

Jose Molina, the director of the Bureau of Animal Industry, said if an infection is found, all poultry within a three-kilometer radius will be culled.

Pamphlets on the bird flu will be distributed nationwide, Drilon said.

Drilon added that the country is taking advantage of a Japanese ban on poultry imports from Thailand.

Bird flu killed or forced the slaughter of millions of birds when it emerged in 10 Asian countries last year. The virus jumped to humans in Vietnam, where it has killed 30 people in the past year, and Thailand, where it killed 12.

Since Dec. 30, 10 people have died of bird flu in Vietnam. AP

Pro-VAT solons warned of poll demise

LUCENA CITY—Members of Congress who voted to approve the 2-percent hike in the value-added tax face rejection by the people in the 2007 elections, the militant fisherfolk alliance Pam-bansang Lakas ng Kilusang Mammalakaya ng Pilipinas said.

“Those who are planning to seek another term in the 2007 national elections will face the ultimate rejection of the electorate. This is their reward for betraying the ... interest ... of the people,” said Pamalakaya national chair Fernando Hicap in a press statement.

Hicap called the newly approved VAT hike as “a national crime” against the people.

Approved by a 126-11 vote with no abstention, the legislation aims to raise the VAT rate from the present 10 percent to 12 percent.

The bill’s proponent argued that the measure would provide additional P34.9 billion for the cash-strapped government.

Hicap said Pamalakaya’s first step would be to expose the identities of the 126 lawmakers who voted for the approval of the bill.

“Let them suffer wholesale condemnation for betraying the people’s interest and welfare. Pro-VAT legislators cannot use their legislative immunity to stop us from frustrating their respective political bids in 2007,” he said.

Hicap said the VAT hike is a non-negotiable issue to the “downtrodden and marginalized.” Delfin T. Mallari Jr., PDI Southern Luzon Bureau

Senator vows to oppose P36-B rail plan

ROXAS CITY—Sen. Manuel “Mar” Roxas II reiterated his opposition to the plan to revive and rehabilitate the Panay Railways, as this would just be another white elephant.

“I already studied this... This would be another white elephant project once pursued,” said Roxas, who went to his home province to attend the Dinagyang Festival.

He said the public would suffer because they would have to pay for the high cost of materials.

Roxas said reviving the Panay Railways is impractical as it would make transportation of goods more expensive.

He said there will be a “triple handling” of products brought in by the train—from the farms to the train station and to the market.

Roxas said the amount to be spent on the project should instead be used for roads and highways.

Nick Rivas, National Economic Development Authority specialist, said the 120-km railway connecting Capiz and Iloilo will cost P36.8 billion, nine times the cost of an airport of international standards. Felipe Celino, PDI Visayas Bureau

Energy chief now admits crisis real, action 'VITAL'

MANILA, Nov. 10 (AP) — Energy Secretary Carlos Dela Cruz has admitted that the Philippines is facing a real energy crisis and that immediate action is vital to avert a disaster.

Dela Cruz, who has been in the post for less than a year, said the country's energy reserves are critically low and that the government must take drastic measures to conserve energy and explore alternative sources.

"We are in a very difficult situation," he said. "The reserves are low, and the demand is high. We need to take action now to prevent a crisis that could have serious consequences for the economy and the environment."

Dela Cruz said the government is working to increase the production of coal and oil, but that these efforts will take time. In the meantime, he said, the government is implementing a series of measures to conserve energy, including a ban on the use of incandescent light bulbs and a campaign to encourage people to turn off lights and appliances when not in use.

"We are doing everything we can to ensure that we have enough energy to meet our needs," he said. "But we need the public to help us. We need to conserve energy and use it wisely. That is the only way we can avoid a crisis."

Dela Cruz said the government is also working to explore alternative sources of energy, such as solar and wind power. However, he said, these sources are still in the early stages of development and will not be able to meet the country's energy needs in the near future.

"We are committed to finding a sustainable solution to our energy problem," he said. "But we need to act now. We need to take action that is vital to our survival."

What crisis? Militants say it's baloney

MANILA, Nov. 10 (AP) — Militants in the Philippines say the government's claim of an energy crisis is "baloney" and that the country has enough energy to meet its needs.

The militants, who are part of a group called the National Democratic Front, said the government is trying to scare people into supporting their cause by claiming that the country is facing an energy crisis.

"The government is lying," said a militant leader. "We have enough energy to meet our needs. The crisis is a hoax. The government is trying to scare people into supporting our cause. We are not interested in energy. We are interested in freedom."

The militants said they are not interested in energy. They said they are interested in freedom and in ending the government's oppression of the people.

"We are not interested in energy," said another militant. "We are interested in freedom. We are interested in ending the government's oppression of the people. We are interested in ending the government's corruption and in ending the government's abuse of power."

Puroys make do with less

MANILA, Nov. 10 (AP) — Poor people in the Philippines are making do with less energy as the government's energy crisis deepens.

The poor people, who are living in slums and shantytowns, said they are having to conserve energy and use it more wisely. They said they are having to turn off lights and appliances when not in use and that they are having to use kerosene lamps instead of electricity.

"We are making do with less," said a poor person. "We are conserving energy and using it more wisely. We are turning off lights and appliances when not in use. We are using kerosene lamps instead of electricity. We are making do with less."

Bad credit card loans surge to P14B

By Rhea C. Bando

Philippines' bad credit card loans have surged to P14 billion in the first three months of 2014, up from P12 billion in the same period last year.

The surge in bad credit card loans is a result of the increasing number of Filipinos who are using credit cards. According to a report by the Philippine Credit Card Association (PCCA), the number of credit cards issued in the Philippines increased by 10 percent in the first three months of 2014 compared to the same period last year.

The PCCA report also shows that the total value of credit card transactions in the Philippines increased by 15 percent in the first three months of 2014 compared to the same period last year. This increase in credit card usage has led to a surge in bad credit card loans, as more Filipinos are unable to pay their credit card bills on time.

No audit plan seen for 100,000 taxpayers

By Rhea C. Bando

The Department of Internal Revenue (DOR) has announced that it will not audit 100,000 taxpayers who have filed their income tax returns for the year 2013. This decision is part of the DOR's effort to reduce the number of audits and to focus on high-risk taxpayers.

The DOR has identified 100,000 taxpayers who have filed their income tax returns for the year 2013 and who are not subject to audit. These taxpayers are considered to be low-risk and are therefore not subject to audit.
